The Institute of Measurement and Control is committed to promoting the professional excellence and standing of engineers and technologists at all levels in the automation, instrumentation, control and related industries. Our aims are to serve the public by advancing the science and practice of measurement and control technologies and their various applications, to foster the exchange of views and the communication of knowledge and ideas in these activities, and to promote the professional development and qualification of our members.

In 2017 the Institute launched a new quarterly magazine which is a high quality journal with technical features related to measurement and control. This new coffee table type magazine is circulated to the InstMC 3002 individual and 100 company members. It is also aimed at anyone interested in the various uses of measurement and control. It is a positioning and marketing tool for the Institute as well as raising awareness to a wider audience of the use of measurement and control in the world today.

LOCAL SECTION NEWS:

THE UK wants to become the safest country in the world, and every day thousands of people are working together to achieve that goal. But how can we do this in an era of increasing threats and opportunities?

To answer this question, the UK Government has introduced a new strategy for national security, which sets out the country’s priorities for the next decade. The strategy recognises that the UK is increasingly vulnerable to attack from both inside and outside its borders, and that it must adapt to this new environment.

The UK has already made significant progress in improving its security capabilities, but more needs to be done. The strategy sets out a clear plan for how the UK can achieve its goals, and it provides a framework for all agencies to work together to make the country safer.

In practice, this means that every agency, from the police to the military, will be working towards the same goal. This will require a new way of thinking, and a willingness to share information and resources.

The strategy also includes a number of new measures, such as the creation of a new national cyber security centre, and the introduction of a new approach to counter-terrorism.

In the end, the goal is to create a country where the people feel safe, and where their freedoms are protected. The UK is well on its way to achieving this, and it will take everyone working together to make it happen.

The strategy is available to read on the UK Government’s website.
